J.S. trade mission tests the odds here

Special to the Jordan Times

AMMAN, May 18 — A 12-man U.S. building supplies and construction equipment trade mission is in Amman getting to know the needs and preferences of local contractors...

I find that as an American, I am at a disadvantage to other countries streamlined to do business here. Such as Japan, which lives exports, selling, promoting and making sure people know they are a product for sale...

Mr. Smith added: "The private sector in Jordan is looking for new technologies to integrate into the systems they are using now. The more we spoke to here are looking for up-to-date systems that will save labour and time."

Another member of the delegation, Mr. Alexander Visser of Nor-International, said: "Egypt is a very difficult market; financing is difficult. The first question we are asked is, 'How much?' and the next is, 'It's too expensive.' Egypt relies on its tremendous resources, whereas Jordan is looking for automation. Of course, geographically Jordan is much smaller, but it is a better bet in that people here are ready to work with more sophisticated equipment."

Mr. Visser's firm manufactures heavy-duty masonry saws and abrasive products. Nor-International has established a distribution centre in Brno for the Middle East. "We have 75 plants throughout the world, consolidate our products in Antwerp and send them to the Middle East," instead of having each plant handle the ordering, packing and billing for Middle East orders...

Mr. Smith said, "There is a potentially good market in Egypt, not only in high technology, but for versatile machines geared to production needs." On Saturday and Sunday, members of the mission met with government officials, including Minister of Public Works Awmi Al Masri, Mayor Isam Ajlouni and Undersecretary of Industry and Commerce Mohammed Saleh Al Hourani.

Jordan is interested in serving as a central building supplies and construction equipment distribution point for the Middle East for information and products," Mr. Matzke said. "There are opportunities for joint ventures with Jordanian firms or for setting up subsidiaries here" for the Jordanian, Saudi and Iraqi markets.

The government is promoting the idea of a building materials centre in Jordan where buyers in the Middle East could come to see samples and brochures of products from all over the world, including the United States.

From the government's standpoint, a recurring theme has been that they would like a regional office set up here as an outlet for information and building materials products. They view Jordan as a centre for disseminating goods, services and technology," Mr. Smith said. "Ultimately there is a large market in Jordan in view of the new five-year plan," he added.

The trade mission was to have gone on from here to Iraq today. Members had already obtained visas in the United States, but were to have obtained them here. But the visas were cancelled and others not issued.

Members of the trade mission were interested in getting into Iraq, finding out more about it on a face-to-face basis," Mr. Matzke said.

At present we are not going to Iraq because of a problem with the visa. We have not been able to determine what that problem is, but I say in that regard would be pure speculation, but most of us in our mission wanted very much to go there," he said.

My understanding is that our visas are no longer valid. I got this from the Department of Commerce and it has been confirmed by the embassy here.

As a result, most members have agreed to stay on a couple of additional days here to make more contacts," he added. It is a disappointment, Iraq is the main market and our main objective was to go there," Mr. Visser said, adding that he had made contacts with people in Jordan who might act as distributors in Iraq. Jordanians have pointed out that they could act as agents for our products in Iraq," Mr. Matzke confirmed.

ambassador Sukru Elegdad also alleged that the group moved Mr. Mehmet Ali Agca through seven European countries prior to the attempt, providing him with money and false identities after his escape from a Turkish prison in 1979.

I understand this man has been taken over by some international terrorist organisation," Mr. Elegdad said on the ABC television work's "Issues and Answers" programme.

Mr. Elegdad said the group paid Mr. Agca by depositing money in another's bank account. He said "$4,000 or $5,000" was found in an account after the 1979 murder of Turkish newspaper editor Abdi Kici.

There is a correlation between these large sums of money and the notorious actions of Mehmet Ali Agca," Mr. Elegdad said, adding that Mr. Agca received "several" large payments through his mother's account.

Also speaking on "Issues and Answers," Mr. Anthony Quainton, chief of the U.S. State Department's office for combating terrorism, said the identity of Mr. Agca's backers was unknown, but agreed there was little doubt the convicted murderer received outside funding.

You've got to assume that he had friends, that he had contacts, that he had people who provided not only the money but the weapons," he said.

Turkish police arrested two more persons in connection with the passport used by Mr. Agca, official sources said today.

Mr. Faruk Ozgun, 28, a textile worker whose name was on the passport used by Mr. Agca to travel around Europe, was taken into custody late Friday.

They said the investigation into how Mr. Agca obtained his fake passport was still under way. Three detectives from Ankara were assisting the probe, they said.

Authorities identified the teacher as Mr. Ibrahim Kurt, 29, a former leader of the ultra-nationalist "Ulu Ulu" (Divine Ideal) organisation based in Nevsehir, in south central Turkey. Mr. Agca is said to be an extreme nationalist who belonged to the now defunct Action Party. Mr. Kurt is suspected of having arranged the identity card in Mr. Ozgun's name which was used to have the passport certified by police in the provincial centre.

They said Mr. Kurt also personally mailed the completed passport to Mr. Agca in Yugoslavia where he was hiding after his prison escape.

Sources said the third man in custody was Mr. Erban Ender, a former policeman, whose photo appeared in Mr. Agca's passport. They also confirmed that the police chief of Nevsehir in charge of issuing passports and the staff were questioned and released Friday.

Vatican authorities today stressed that the Pope's "sincere pardon" of his assailant yesterday will have no effect on criminal proceedings against the suspect.

Habib back in Damascus

DAMASCUS, May 18 (Agencies) — U.S. presidential envoy Philip Habib flew to Syria today for his third visit to seek a solution to the missile crisis in Lebanon, a U.S. embassy spokesman said.

He arrived from Riyadh, where he sought Saudi Arabian support for his peace shuttle. The spokesman said it was unclear how long Mr. Habib would stay in Damascus.

The Syrian cabinet met before his arrival. The official Syrian news agency SANA said Prime Minister Abdul Rauf Al Kasm had briefed ministers on what he called "the political and military crisis fabricated by the Zionist enemy" against Syria's role in the region and particularly in Lebanon.

Syrian officials made it clear that it was up to Mr. Habib to present new proposals for settling the crisis, now in its third week.

They have accused Mr. Habib of pressing the Israeli line for the withdrawal of the missiles. During his last visit, Mr. Habib was told by Syrian President Hafez Al Assad that the anti-aircraft rockets would not be removed under Israeli or U.S. pressure.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin today told reporters in occupied Jerusalem he was awaiting word from Mr. Habib, who was expected in Israel tomorrow after his visit to Damascus.

Mr. Begin briefed the Knesset's Foreign Affairs and Defence Committee on the crisis, and afterward told reporters he did not think the Soviet and American naval task forces in the eastern Mediterranean would get into a clash. He said the two superpowers' fleets had cruised those waters before in times of crisis without trouble developing between them.

The Lebanese capital, meanwhile, plunged back into violence tonight, bringing death and panic to a densely populated Palestinian refugee camp.

Mortars and rockets fell around the camp in Sabra, south Beirut, starting fires and sending mothers racing through the streets holding their children.

Security sources reported three killed and 50 injured in the two-hour bombardment of Sabra but were unable to say how many of them were refugees.

Jordan Hotels Association sets freeze on room rates

AMMAN, May 18 (Petra) — The Jordan Hotels Association (JHA) will freeze hotel room rates at their current levels until the end of 1981 with a view to encouraging tourism in Jordan, JHA Chairman Zuhair Al Ajlouni announced here today.

He said that the freeze will enable tourist groups visiting Jordan to continue enjoying special rates.

Keeping hotel rates at last year's levels will give Jordan the cheapest hotel rooms in the region, he said. Mr. Ajlouni added that a joint committee of the Ministry of Tourism and the JHA has been set up to monitor hotel rates in Jordan.

The Ministry of Tourism has also adopted a series of measures aimed at offering further facilities to tourists this summer, according to Director General of Tourism Michael Hamameh. These measures, he said, include facilitating the entry of tourists by airports and, at land border posts in cooperation with the Public Security Directorate and the customs authorities.

Also, hotels, restaurants and other tourist centres have been requested to extend the best possible services to the tourists, Mr. Hamameh said. According to Mr. Hamameh, the Ministry of Tourism expects an influx of Arab and non-Arab tourists to Jordan this summer, well above the normal numbers the country receives every year.

Islamabad asks Kabul to return PIA hijackers

ISLAMABAD, May 18 (R) — Pakistan said today it had asked the Soviet-backed government in Kabul to hand over immediately and unconditionally the three hijackers of a Pakistani airliner who now live in Afghanistan.

A foreign ministry statement on the extradition request accused the Afghan authorities of harbouring the gunmen in contravention of international law, gunmen in contravention of international law.

It said Afghanistan, having signed three international conventions on hijacking, must either try to extradite the gunmen, for whom the Pakistani authorities have offered a $40,000 reward, or prosecute them.

Earlier this month western diplomats in Kabul reported that the three gunmen and about 20 of the 54 prisoners released from jail in Pakistan in exchange for the more than 100 hostage passengers and crew on the Pakistani airliner had arrived in Afghanistan from New Delhi using Syrian passports.

Hunt on for Agca's mystery allies

NEW YORK, May 18 (A.P.) — A Turk accused of wounding Pope John Paul II was a professional killer "hired and shielded by unidentified international right-wing political group, according to the Turkish ambassador to the United States.

ambassador Sukru Elegdad also alleged that the group moved Mr. Mehmet Ali Agca through seven European countries prior to the attempt, providing him with money and false identities after his escape from a Turkish prison in 1979.

AMMAN, May 18 (Petra) — The three-day meetings of the sports reporting working group of the Arab States Broadcasting Union (ASBU) concluded in Amman today.

The group approved several recommendations related to strengthening and coordinating sports news exchange among Arab countries, as well as the necessary steps to cover Arab and international sports tournaments, and the drafting of a programme for training staff working on sports programmes.

The group also recommended effective cooperation among the quarters responsible for sports programmes in Arab television stations and emphasised the importance of a specialised sports coordinator in every Arab television network to supervise the exchange of sports news.

The group also recommended that each Arab television network prepare a list of important sports events which would take place in the country concerned, and send it to the general secretariat of the union to distribute it to all the concerned bodies. The group also recommended that a documentary programme on sports and youth be prepared in every Arab country, to be submitted to the participants at the next meeting of the group. On coverage for prominent Arab sports events, the group recommended cooperation and coordination among all the Arab radio and television networks. It requested the union's general secretariat to collect all the information pertaining to the Arab sports tournament which will be held in Tunis in July. The group decided to hold its next meeting in Tunis in the second half of next January.

The participants in the meetings sent cables of thanks to the minister of information, the director of Jordan Television and the director of Radio Jordan for the high facilities which enabled the group to finish its work.

Down with routine: Summer jobs for students: Up with productivity Don't all speak at once!

By Mohammad Ayish
Special to the Jordan Times

IAN — Government employees are described as more lax and less "professional" than their counterparts in the private sector. But that image may be on the point -- not because of the recent salary cut but thanks to a new "programme of professionalism" recently introduced at the Ministry of Social Development.

The programme will serve as a model to be followed by other departments and institutions, according to the minister-secretary, Mr. Mohli Werdom. The programme aims at boosting the productivity of the employees by getting away with routine and making employees aware of time factors, Mr. Werdom told the Jordan Times. "The Ministry of Social Development is the most appropriate government body in which to apply the programme," he said, "since it has the fewest employees; they are easy to control."

"The programme calls for each directorate at the ministry to submit a plan of action covering the directorate's intentions, particularly in relation to money allocations," Mr. Werdom explained. Such a programme should be submitted one month in advance of its implementation, he said.

"Directorates are also required to submit yearly reports that outline their plans for the coming year. This makes them proceed according to plans approved by us, instead of going through the dull routine of weekly or daily reports."

The professionalism programme introduced by the Ministry of Social Development gives special emphasis to the employee himself as the major element in the whole operation. Mr. Werdom said that late last month, his ministry chose a typical work day in which to give its employees forms to fill in with information on what they had done the previous day, what they did on the sample day and what they planned to do the next day.

"By getting the employee directly to face up to the realities he deals with in his working environment, he will develop a sense of commitment and attachment to his work," Mr. Werdom commented.

"The results were quite impressive," he said of the survey; "our employees managed to finish off all their work ahead of time."

"They even completed some of the remaining work from the previous day!" These results, he maintained, prove that many problems reside not in the organisation of government institutions, but in the employee himself.

The under-secretary said that his ministry is planning to hold similar activities on three work days this month, expanding the base of the experiment to include more employees. "At the end of the work days, we'll ask the employees if there is any reason why the whole year should not be the same as this typical day," Mr. Werdom said.

But while many problems can be traced to employee attitudes, the old civil service code is also to blame. "The element of incentives -- absent from the old civil service code and present in the new one -- is encouraging," Mr. Werdom said. Last month, the cabinet and the National Consultative Council approved and ratified the new code, which calls for rewards to be given to hard-working government employees.

"That step brings our work situation closer to that of the private sector, where material as well as moral incentives appear to have an effective role in increasing productivity and doing away with routine," he said. Working problems confronting private-sector employees are solved over the telephone, he added, while civil servants have to go and visit various offices whenever they face any problem.

Mr. Werdom said that the application of the professionalism programme at his ministry as a "way of life" calls for diplomacy, respect and appreciation on the part of management. "It is not a programme of dictation and authoritarianism, but one of mutual understanding, by which our employees will come to face up to the reality of their work," he said.

AMMAN — Summer jobs are up for the asking for university students in Jordan -- and, fortunately enough, no resumes are needed.

About 1,200 job opportunities at various Jordanian companies have been created, for both male and female students from the two universities. It seems, however, that nobody is queuing up to take them.

So far, only 450 students have applied from the University of Jordan, and another 150 from Yarmouk University. The door has not been closed, and more applications are expected in the next few weeks.

The summer employment programme was originated by the Ministry of Labour, part of the aim being "to use local labour in development plans and projects," Mr. Mansour 'Utoum, head of the Employment Department at the Ministry of Labour, told the Jordan Times. On the other hand, the students themselves could benefit from this chance to help out with their tuition expenses -- which have doubled in one year. "Though the number of applicants is small, it is encouraging," Mr. 'Utoum said.

This summer will witness the first trial of the programme, which is expected to grow in size next year.

"We intend to create similar work opportunities for college and high school students," Mr. 'Utoum said.

Besides the practical experience, students will get to know the hard, "real" side of life. And they will, it is hoped, develop a self-reliant nature.

The Ministry of Labour has been doing quite a job. During the last four months, it has contacted about 100 Jordanian companies and has come up with 1,200 job vacancies. "The companies were really helpful," Mr. 'Utoum said;

"we did not expect such a response."

But the monthly salaries suggested by the companies -- ranging between JD 30 and JD 100 -- have obviously discouraged the students, who haven't been terribly enthusiastic about asking for work.

According to Mr. Abdul Hameed Sabbagh, director of the Students' Service Department at the University of Jordan, "the university has always encouraged its students to work, and the summer programme has been promoted at both universities."

For the past four months, the two universities have carried out campaigns to encourage the students to work. Notices were hung on boards in all faculties. Yet some students claim that the campaigns were not very noticeable. "I did not hear about the programme until now," one of them told the Jordan Times.

Mr. 'Utoum said, "We also did some campaigning on the radio and in the local newspapers."

The openings are geared to correspond with the students' abilities and skills, their family's financial situation, their place of abode and their interests. "We tried to find jobs in every area of Jordan, so that a student who lives in Aqaba can work there too," Mr. 'Utoum said.

He added, "Instead of using foreign labour, we can use our own local potential."

requirements for the jobs they offered. For example the Water Supply Corporation asked only for chemists and geologists; many other firms wanted male students only.

Only eight per cent of the total of 600 applicants from both universities were girls. This, Mr. Sabbagh said, "is because some companies wanted only male students. Girls are as eager to work as boys."

Another factor is that many students take summer courses, which may also account for the small number of applications.

The universities themselves offer jobs for students throughout the academic year. Many girls work in the dormitories, and other students -- regardless of their sex -- work at the libraries or in the laboratories.

"We find it worthwhile to work at the university itself," Miss Lana Mas'oud, a second-year agriculture student said, "because we benefit from the experience directly related to our specialisation."

The Ministry of Labour, however, had another motive in initiating the programme. In the long run, students who experience the practical side of life will be more job-oriented, Mr. 'Utoum said.

ARAB PRESS COMMENTARY

AL RA'I: We cannot easily accept the allegations made by the enemy cabinet yesterday to the effect that the enemy government has chosen a diplomatic solution to the current crisis with Syria.

We cannot accept these allegations, because we know that all past Israeli aggressions and wars against the Arab Nation were mainly based on the element of surprise, to achieve the biggest possible gains in the shortest period possible. Our doubts almost reach the point of certainty that Mr. Begin's differences with the Labour Party and other political groups are no more than a shrewd propaganda campaign aimed at persuading the parties concerned in the crisis that the government's approval of another chance for U.S. special envoy Philip Habib came as a result of pressure from the Israeli public, and that consequently, this choice represents the real stand of the Zionist entity towards the current crisis.

However, if the enemy government is serious this time in resorting to a diplomatic solution, we believe that the reason for this choice is Mr. Begin's conviction that the Babib mission has succeeded in wresting a recognition of Israel's demands concerning Lebanon from the various sides involved in the crisis, particularly that of expanding Israel's "secure borders" to include the Bekaa Valley and perhaps all of Lebanon.

AL DUSTOUR: During his visits to Baghdad and Riyadh, His Majesty King Hussein affirmed that a unified Arab stand is the only guarantee for coping with the current circumstances facing the Arab Nation. His Majesty said that Jordan is advocating this stand, supporting it and seeking to achieve it.

This call is made by King Hussein with a special significance, because it is made by a political thinker and an expert in the affairs of the area and in the stormy political fluctuations in it. It is also made by a pan-Arab leader whose country is standing on the longest line of confrontation with the Zionist enemy. Furthermore, the call reflects Jordan's constant eagerness to protect the supreme Arab interest and always to give it priority.

What is evident to everyone is that if fighting breaks out, it will be Israel which will be the aggressor. It was Israel which fabricated the missile crisis and aggravated it, and now it is allowing a deceptive period of time before it launches its aggression, exactly as it did before the 1967 aggression and its occupation of the rest of Palestine, the Golan Heights and Sinai. The fabrication and escalation of the missile crisis is an Israeli scheme to justify its aggression against Lebanon and the Arab Nation, particularly against the countries which opposed the Camp David plot.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

'Indeed correct'

To the editor:

In respect to the letter signed by Mr. Haitham Goussous and published on page 4 of the May 13 issue of the Jordan Times, I would like to assert that the Jordan Times was indeed correct in referring to the birds donated to the Shmeisani bird garden by Their Majesties King Hussein and Queen Noor as cranes. In fact they are Crowned Cranes, with the Latin name balearia regulorum. I have failed to find any reference to a bird called "Grews", either in encyclopaedias, dictionaries or in bird reference books of East and Central Africa.

This bird, the Crowned Crane, is common in East Africa, mainly Kenya, Uganda and Southern Sudan. It has been adopted by Uganda as a national emblem. They are a common sight of everyday life near lakes in Uganda.

Unfree, unfair

THERE HAVE been some disturbing signs over the past year that the West European industrial states and the United States may be embarking on a new era of protectionist trade policies. The ultimate effect of this trend on commodity-producing Third World states seeking to develop their own industrial base is hard to predict today; but it augurs badly for these states, of which Jordan is one. The most dramatic developments have been in the "voluntary" restrictions on automobile exports from Japan to Europe and the USA. But what starts with automobiles can quickly spill over into other fields. It is well accepted in principle that free and open trade among all states is the best guarantor of healthy, competitive economic development and growth for all states. If Japan can produce better cars at a lower price than Western manufacturers, it makes sense to let the Japanese dominate the car market, and thus allow free market forces to shift industrial production in the West into other fields in which the West has either a technological edge or a larger resource base. The same applies for the Third World. The contradiction that we see developing is that the West wants the Third World to produce unlimited amounts of low-priced commodities, but it wants to control the kinds and amounts of finished products reaching the West from other parts of the world. This is neither free, nor fair trading. It should be nipped in the bud.

until July 19 and only then for the tribunal to begin deciding cases. Either government can ask that the negotiating period be extended another three months until Oct. 19.

Arbiters meet to resolve claims...

Arbiters from each took hands in the marble Peace Palace just after 10 a.m. (0830 GMT). Then they sat in an elegant room, facing each other at a long table, to begin their talks.

Among the initial tasks of the six original arbitrators is to pick three third-party tribunal members and to decide whether the tribunal will sit in The Hague. The permanent court of arbitration, housed in the Peace Palace, has offered its facilities for the tribunal.

Director of the Arbitration Court Jacob Varkamp said he would open the meeting with a few words of welcome and then let the two sides get down to work.

Challenges in American courts to the constitutionality of the Carter administration settlement of the crisis also could hold up the tribunal. The agreement said claims must be shifted from U.S. courts to the tribunal, but some companies have appealed. A Supreme Court ruling is expected by July.

Killed mayors offer return for trial

ITO, May 18 (R) — Two mayors deported by year ago have offered to face trial to disprove charges they incited a guerrilla attack in Hebron in which six Jews were killed.

The two men, in Canada after a tour of Europe and the United States to publicise their case, said they were willing to face charges and go to jail if it could be proved they did anything wrong.

He said a military solution to the conflict had been impossible from the beginning. Mr. Bani-Sadr, who has been leading the Iranian side in discussions with the peace missions, said he had put questions to them to clarify some vague points.

MONROVIA, Liberia, May 18 — The Liberian military leader, Sgt. Samuel Doe, has disclosed why he ordered a reduction of staff at the Soviet embassy in Monrovia and the closure of the Libyan mission.

When the Libyan People's Bureau was established here, Liberia's army commander, Brig. Gen. Thomas Quiwonkpa, came out strongly against the decision.

Protestors for, against Khomeini clash in L.A.

ANGELES, May 18 (A.P.) — About 650 demonstrators for the Iranian regime of Ayatollah Khomeini clashed yesterday and today in Los Angeles, as they physically separated more than 300 police officers' deputies, officials and people were arrested.

They called on Israel to obey three United Nations Security Council resolutions urging they be allowed to go home.

He discounted the reduction of the Soviet embassy staff would lead to improved relations between the two countries. The establishment last March of the Libyan People's Bureau, as Libyan embassies throughout the world have become known under leader Muammar Qadhafi, was not "in the interests of the Liberian people," Sgt. Doe told the agency.

He said he had given five Libyan and nine Soviet diplomats two weeks in which to leave the country. The Soviet ambassador to Liberia, Mr. Anatoly Oulanov, was in Moscow when the order was given to reduce his staff.

Roadblocks in the way of Egypt's 'green revolution'

EGYPT needs to reclaim large areas of land to feed its growing population. But planning muddle and insistence on the public sector keeping control are deterring investors.

oil revenue into reclamation — Egypt produced 580,000 b/d last year — it will be relying on the private sector (foreign and local) to make up the difference.

Reclamation is, therefore, being given top priority. But the investment is huge, a minimum of $2,000 to $3,500 an acre for basic desert reclamation close to water (without factories to process the produce), but up to twice that amount in difficult areas.

soft drinks manufacturers PepsiCo and Coca Cola give some examples. PepsiCo's venture at Salheya, between Ismailia and Cairo, with the powerful Arab Contractors (Osman Ahmad Osman) to produce vegetables and dairy produce was disbanded last summer.

Another is how the Egyptians themselves (with a few honourable exceptions) approached reclamation. The experiences of

In an attempt to reconcile divergent positions

Yamani, Al Sabah meet on oil prices

BAHRAIN, May 18 (R) — Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Ahmad Zaki Yamani and the Oil Minister of Kuwait, Ali Khalifa Al Sabah, met in Riyadh today a week before the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) meets on prices in Geneva.

Gulf oil market analysts said the two were probably trying to reconcile divergent positions.

Saudi Arabia, the largest oil exporter, is flooding the market with a huge output of 10.3 million barrels a day (b/d) in a bid to reunify OPEC prices, creating a glut that is putting pressure on some exporters to cut prices.

The Saudis themselves charge $32 a barrel (42 U.S. gallons) but other prices are higher, up to $41 and Sheikh Yamani has said some seem to him to be too high.

Analysts said Kuwait belongs to a majority which would oppose price cuts in Geneva on May 25 but might agree to a freeze, arguing that in due course this would give Sheikh Yamani a real-term price fall because of the rate of world inflation.

The official Saudi Press Agency said the oil ministers held talks after Sheikh Ali Khalifa delivered a letter from the Amir of Kuwait, Sheikh Jaber Al Ahmad Al Sabah, to Crown Prince Fahd, in day-to-day charge of the Saudi government under King Khaled.

"One alternative seems to be that if other OPEC states do nothing now, the Saudis would let creeping inflation turn the trick," PIW said.

It noted that the Saudis, at $32 a barrel, felt that the base price of $36 on which most of the 13 OPEC members now align their rates was too high. But in another year inflation could ratchet up the "real" 32-dollar price to $36

"meanwhile other producers would mark time with a freeze," PIW said.

It added, however, that African producers of top-quality crudes wanted a base price higher than $36 and the Geneva meeting "looks set for a replay of similar painful deadlocks over pricing and production matters."

Saudi Arabia seeks a unified price so as to enable OPEC to operate a new formula for raising oil prices in line with the West's inflation and economic growth, which it argues will create a more stable world oil market.

Last year's budget totalled 16 billion dirhams (about $4.3 billion).

WAM said the budget allocated 2.5 billion dirhams (about $676 million) for current and new development projects. The budget will be presented to the Federal National Council (parliament) for approval.

Turkey's inflation rate drops to 34.1%

ANKARA, May 18 (R) — Turkey's annual inflation rate dropped last month to 34.1 per cent, the lowest for three years, encouraging government economic planners, according to official statistics released today.

Inflation has steadily dropped since the introduction in January last year of a package of austerity measures aimed at curbing money supply and controlling prices.

The April monthly figures showed that prices rose 0.8 per cent, the same as in March. Government planners are hoping to hold inflation down to below 40 per cent this year. Last year it ran at around 100 per cent.

U.S. prime rate up to 20%

NEW YORK, May 18 (A.P.) — Two major banks raised their prime lending rate today to 20 per cent, becoming the first U.S. banks to charge that rate since early February.

The boost was initiated by Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., New York, the fifth-largest U.S. commercial bank, and matched by First National Bank of Chicago, ranked no. 9.

The increase came amid concern that the Federal Reserve Board will again tighten credit in an effort to slow monetary growth and fight inflation. The board's policy-making Open Market Committee was meeting today.

The prime is the rate charged banks on loans to corporate customers, although some companies are able at times to negotiate better rates and many companies must pay higher rates. After a relatively slow growth early in the year, the U.S. basic money supply surged at an annual rate of 1.9 per cent in April. That apparent has led to credit tightening by Fed that has pushed up interest rates.

The Open Market Committee meeting was private, and decision will not be announced for at least a month.

Japanese machinery exports up 35.8%

TOKYO, May 18 (R) — Japanese machinery exports soared in the past year to a record $91 billion causing serious trade conflicts with Western competitors, the Japanese Machinery Exporters Association said today.

The 35.8 per cent increase compared to a rise of 4.7 per cent in 1979-80, with cars, ships and electronic goods accounting for the bulk of it.

Car exports jumped 40.4 per cent to $32.3 billion accounting for more than a third of total machinery exports.

Despite criticism from West European shipbuilders that Japan was monopolising the industry, ship exports leaped 45.2 per cent to $5.9 billion, the association said.

Television set exports rose 36.1 per cent to one billion dollars while machine tools went up 27.2 per cent to $1.3 billion and exports of video cassette recorders doubled to reach $2.4 billion it said.

The trade ministry announced last Friday that exports of industrial plant in the fiscal year fell a sharp 24.6 per cent to $8.9 billion due mainly to a steep drop in exports to China following economic changes there and sanctions against the Soviet Union after its military intervention in Afghanistan.

The sharp decline in plant exports was easily offset by brisk exports of other items, the association said.

Industrial machinery exports went up 28.6 per cent to $10.9 billion while heavy electric machine exports were up 34.2 per cent to $3 billion the association said.

Japanese machinery exports are expected to increase further in the current fiscal year because car manufacturers are exporting actively to Asia, Africa, and South America, it said.

However, industry sources said Japanese plant exporters face strong competition from West European competitors this year as the values of European currencies against the dollar were dropping, making their products cheaper for importers.

The French franc and West German mark have fallen about 30 per cent against the dollar since last summer reflecting the political unrest in Poland and the recent socialist victory in the French presidential election, while the yen has remained fairly strong, they said.

'Iron Lady' under heavy political pressure as McCreech inches to death

BELFAST, May 18 (A.P.) — Irish Republican Army hunger-striker Raymond McCreech was reported nearing death today on the 58th day of his fast in the Maze prison, in a mac-

Amid a buildup of political pressure in London for a major reconsideration of government policy on Northern Ireland to avert serious trouble, the IRA's political front, Sinn Fein, said Mr. McCreech was blind, lapsing into unconsciousness and in "an advanced state of weakness."

A spokesman said Mr. McCreech, 34, who was visited by his family yesterday in the prison's hospital wing, had only two or three days to live.

Britain's Northern Ireland Office said his condition "continues to deteriorate."

Another hunger-striker, Patrick O'Hara, also has gone without food for 58 days. But although Sinn Fein reported he was in serious condition, he was not expected to die before Mr. McCreech.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has repeatedly vowed she will not give in to the hunger-striker's demands that they be treated as political prisoners rather than criminals because their crimes were politically motivated.

But the hunger-strike deaths and Mrs. Thatcher's determined stand has given the IRA's "provisional" wing a powerful worldwide propaganda boost and heightened pressure from British politicians to make some concessions to end the deadlock.

The traditional solidarity between Britain's Conservative and Labour parties over handling of the Northern Ireland problem is beginning to crack. This bipartisan approach, which has effectively stifled debate on Northern Ireland for more than a decade, has been jolted by opposition Labourites who have in recent days openly criticised Mrs. Thatcher's tough no-deal policy.

Tony Benn, leader of Labour's increasingly powerful left wing, last week called for a British military withdrawal from the turbulent province and branded partition "a crime against the Irish people."

He reflected growing disquiet in the Labour Party over events in Northern Ireland—fifteen Labourite legislators urged Mrs. Thatcher to make concessions that could end the hunger-strike after 70 guerrillas in the Maze volunteered to keep taking the places of men who die in their bitter showdown with the "Iron Lady."

Mr. Martin Flannery, chairman of Labour's increasingly critical Northern Ireland committee, said in a recent television interview: "I don't want these men to have political prisoner status, but some concessions should be made...to gentle down the situation."

Mr. Merlyn Rees, a former Northern Ireland secretary, proposed ending London's long-standing guarantee to the Protestants that Northern Ireland will remain part of the United Kingdom so long as a majority in the province want it—this was a major departure from the bi-partisan agreement and could provoke deeper unrest among Protestants already alarmed at Mrs. Thatcher's radical new initiative to improve relations with the Irish Republic.

There was no immediate sign that Mrs. Thatcher will yield, but if a significant number of Labourites break ranks over Northern Ireland it would undermine the government policy based on the bi-partisan deal.

The hunger-strike crisis has triggered widespread violence in Catholic sectors of the province. Well-informed sources here said the IRA's leadership is under mounting pressure to bomb English cities to avenge Sands and Hughes.

Pakistan's nuclear equipment supplier's factory sabotaged

MARFDORF, West Germany, May 18 (R) — A West German company which exports nuclear-related equipment to Pakistan was damaged by a bomb today, and an anonymous caller later linked the blast to a similar attack in Switzerland.

Police said the explosion tore a hole in an outside wall and shattered windows at the Hans Waeltschmiller company in Marfdorf, southern Germany, which makes robot arms used to handle radioactive material. No one was injured.

The caller, who spoke accented German, told Reuters news agency in Bonn the attack was launched by what he called the organisation for preventing the spread of nuclear weapons in South Asia.

He said the group was also responsible for a bomb attack in February against a director of a Swiss firm, Cora Engineering, which had sold uranium enrichment plant in Pakistan.

Tension escalates on China-Vietnam border

LONDON, May 18 (R) — Tension along the Chinese-Vietnamese border has mounted after China said it killed 150 Vietnamese soldiers in a clash and Vietnam accused its northern neighbour of armed provocations.

In the worst reported clash since the two countries fought a month-long border war two years ago, the New China News Agency said a Vietnamese force about the size of a regiment attacked a border commune inside China under cover of heavy artillery fire.

Chinese border troops courageously counter-attacked... killing more than 150 of the enemy," the agency said. And Vietnam today accused China of launching a fresh series of border attacks in what it said was its overall strategy against the pro-Vietnamese governments in Kampuchea and Laos.

The Vietnamese army newspaper, Quan Doi Nhan Dan, said there had been dozens of shelling and incursions by Chinese troops into four of Vietnam's northern border provinces during the past 10 days.

The armed forces and local residents had fought back, killing or capturing a number of intruders, the newspaper said, according to the Vietnam News Agency (VNA).

China and Vietnam have protested to each other in the past few days over the latest clashes, the worst reported since their month-long border war two years ago.

Reagan reappears before metal-detected audience

SOUTH BEND, Indiana, May 18 (R) — President Ronald Reagan drew an enthusiastic welcome from an audience of 11,000 today on his first public appearance outside Washington since he was shot in an assassination attempt on March 30.

He was surrounded by extraordinary security measures when he addressed graduates of Notre Dame University where he predicted major advances for Americans and victory for Western values over communism.

For the first time on a presidential trip, everyone attending the ceremony was scanned by metal detectors held by Secret Service agents searching for guns hidden in clothing.

At the airport in South Bend, several hundred well-wishers were kept well away from the presidential arrival area and Mr. Reagan did not follow the usual custom of going over to the crowd to shake hands.

Small groups of demonstrators protesting against U.S. policy in El Salvador and the president's proposals for sweeping cuts in government spending were kept about one kilometre away from university buildings which were heavily patrolled by police.

Madrid raps coup leader's jail visitors

MADRID, May 18 (R) — Several Civil Guards who stormed the Spanish parliament in an attempted coup last February have been punished for trying to visit their rebel leader in a military prison, official sources said today.

A statement from the Civil Guards headquarters here said they travelled to the prison, in the isolated northwestern port of El Ferrol, without authority. It did not give their numbers or the nature of their punishment.

Spanish newspapers said eight guards went 10 days ago to see Lt. Col. Antonio Tejero Molina, indicted for military rebellion after leading the assault on the Cortes (parliament).

Authorities recently limited the number of visitors Col. Tejero could receive to three a day after reports that a constant stream of well-wishers went to see him in the prison.

All non-ranking guards who took part in the assault on parliament have now been released. Seventeen of their officers are under detention.

Dutch journalist faces expulsion from Peking

PEKING, May 18 (R) — China has asked the Dutch newspaper NRC Handelsblad to recall its Peking correspondent, Mr. William van Kemenade, because of alleged "inappropriate" behaviour by him and his Taiwanese wife.

The allegations have not been spelled out. It is the first such action against a foreign correspondent here since November, 1977, when Mr. Ross Munro of the Toronto Globe and Mail was told that his residence card would not be renewed.

Two Chinese diplomats in the Netherlands asked for Mr. Van Kemenade's recall when they visited the Rotterdam offices of NRC Handelsblad on May 5, informed sources here said.

On the same day, China formally downgraded its diplomatic relations with the Netherlands following the Dutch government's decision — hotly opposed by Peking — to allow the sale of two submarines to Taiwan.

Mr. Van Kemenade, who withheld comment today and referred queries to his newspaper, is still in Peking, preparing to take previously-scheduled leave by the end of this month.

In the Hague a spokesman for the NRC Handelsblad said the chief editor would meet a Chinese government representative tomorrow to discuss the Chinese request.

Bhutto women's release requested

KARACHI, May 18 (R) — A religious party appealed today to the military government to release the two detained Bhutto women from jail and allow them to go home. Maulana Mohamamd Shah Amrohi, Nizamul Ulemae Pakistan Party secretary, said in a statement it was unIslamic to keep prisoners in jail without trial. He charged that the government's policy was unjust and said Begum Nusrat Bhutto and Miss Benazir Bhutto, widow and daughter of the executed prime minister, Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, were kept in inhuman conditions. If the government wanted to keep them in custody they could be kept under house arrest, he added. The two were arrested in March after the hijacking of a Pakistani airliner.

U.S. may blockade Cuba for gun-running

NEW YORK, May 18 (R) — Secretary of State Alexander Haig was quoted yesterday as saying that the United States has not ruled out a blockade of Cuba to stop its gun-running to Latin American revolutionaries. Time magazine said Mr. Haig told a private briefing of Republican congressmen last week that Cuba had resumed "massive" arms shipments to Latin American trouble spots. "We've got to stop this," the magazine quoted him as saying, adding that he told the congressmen a blockade "is something that can't be dismissed." The Reagan administration has accused Cuba and the leftist government in Nicaragua of running arms to guerrillas in El Salvador and elsewhere. Time said Mr. Haig hinted that any U.S. move would be taken soon, while Mr. Reagan is riding high in popularity polls.

Indian actress charged for kissing Charles

BOMBAY, May 18 (A.P.) — A magistrate in the city of Meerut, in Uttar Pradesh State, has issued an arrest warrant against teenage actress Padmini Kolhapuri, accused of blackening the fair image of Indian women by publicly kissing Britain's Prince Charles when the future king toured India last December, the English-language "Daily" reported. Magistrate Sardar Akhtar ruled that Miss Kolhapuri had failed to appear in court and had been purposely avoiding the serving of summons, the newspaper said. Mr. Ansar Ahmad, who described himself as a devout Muslim, has filed a suit against Miss Kolhapuri, accusing the well-known actress of defaming Indian culture and trying to gain "cheap publicity by kissing in public." The petition pleads for legal action against Miss Kolhapuri under two sections of the Indian Penal Code covering "obscene acts in public." Prince Charles received a surprise kiss from Miss Kolhapuri when he visited the set of a Hindi-language film "Aahista, Aahista." (Softly, Softly) at a film studio here. The Prince of Wales appeared unperturbed by the kiss and asked his lovely host to wipe the trace of lipstick from the right cheek.

FRESNO, California, May 18 (A.P.) — Mr. William Saroyan, a major U.S. writer died today of cancer at the age of 72. Mr. Saroyan had been hospitalised since collapsing at his home here April 20. WHO considers regulations on breastmilk substitutes

GENEVA, May 18 (R) — The World Health Organisation (WHO) is expected to approve an international code to control marketing of milk powder for infants this week after years of controversy over bottle-feeding.

The 156-state assembly is due to start debate tomorrow on the proposed non-binding code which recommends a complete ban on consumer advertising of breastmilk substitutes.

Under the code, baby pictures would vanish from containers and labels of infant formula food, and the controls would also cover feeding bottles and teats.

The code, drawn up after talks with major baby food companies and critics of their sales promotion in developing countries, is aimed at putting the feeding bottle back on the shelf as a complement to mothers' milk rather than a fashionable substitute for breast-feeding.

The code notes that improper marketing of breastmilk substitutes "can contribute" to improper feeding practices leading to infant malnutritions and death—a major problem in the Third World.

The international Red Cross disclosed last February that it had forbidden feeding bottles for infants in its food aid operations.

For the first time on a presidential trip, everyone attending the ceremony was scanned by metal detectors held by Secret Service agents searching for guns hidden in clothing.

At the airport in South Bend, several hundred well-wishers were kept well away from the presidential arrival area and Mr. Reagan did not follow the usual custom of going over to the crowd to shake hands.

Small groups of demonstrators protesting against U.S. policy in El Salvador and the president's proposals for sweeping cuts in government spending were kept about one kilometre away from university buildings which were heavily patrolled by police.

Bundeswehr searches for identity

By Paul Taylor

BONN: Stirred out of complacency by a series of anti-military riots, West Germany's armed forces (Bundeswehr) are taking a critical and sometimes uncomfortable look at their own traditions and public image.

After a wave of violent protests against public swearing-in ceremonies for recruits last year, Defence Minister Hans Apel summoned leaders of the youth, academic and military worlds to a public debate recently on relations between soldier and society.

Although the alienated youths who disrupted the army's torchlight parades were barely represented at the seminar, Mr. Apel heard more far-reaching criticism than he expected.

Speaker after speaker asked why West Germany had chosen to name barracks and warships after "heroes" of Hitler's armies (Wehrmacht) like Field Marshal Rommel or Admiral Luetjens.

How could youth be expected to identify with the Bundeswehr when Bonn tamely acquiesced in the arms race, a young trade union leader asked.

The debate highlighted a central contradiction of the Bundeswehr, an army in which the only respectable tradition since 1945 has been in questioning and disobeying orders.

By necessity, the Bundeswehr was founded mainly with former Wehrmacht officers in 1955. To guard against any repetition of the control and soldiers were instructed to disobey orders which violated the criminal code.

Ceremonial was reduced to a minimum, goose-stepping and medals were abolished and soldiers were encouraged to think for themselves.

The Bundeswehr, now half-a-million strong, has grown to be West Europe's strongest army and, partly due to the influence of former Wehrmacht officers, has gradually come to resemble any other army.

Medals were recently reintroduced — Hitler's awards had always been honoured — and old time parade-ground "square basing" is also back.

Mr. Apel wants to make military service more attractive to youth, to compensate for a decline in recruitment due to a falling birth rate, but many young Germans appear to be questioning the armed forces' purpose.

West German commentators praised the minister's courage for holding the public debate at a time when Bonn's allies, above all the United States, are making ever greater demands on West Germany within the Western alliance.

Mr. Apel said he was scrapping a 1965 decree setting out the traditions and duties of the armed forces because it did not stress sufficiently the Bundeswehr's job was to secure peace and defend democracy.

Torchlight tattoos, reviled by pacifists and the political left as remnants of Prussian militarism, would be reformed and would remain the exception, he promised.

Some soldiers at the seminar voiced their disagreement at these moves and at the minister's pledge that names of past military figures would no longer be given to units, bases or ships.

They drew comfort from Mr. Apel's refusal to give way to demands that all institutions named after former Wehrmacht officers should be renamed.

Opinion data presented at the seminar suggested that the problem of the Bundeswehr's social acceptability had been greatly exaggerated.

The figures showed that attachment to the military is greater than ever before, reaching proportions which would be the envy of most other NATO defence ministers.

Some 90 per cent of the population say the armed forces are either "important" or "very important" and the same percentage think Bonn must remain committed to the Western alliance.

Some even want to reinforce NATO.
